Early Life and Education

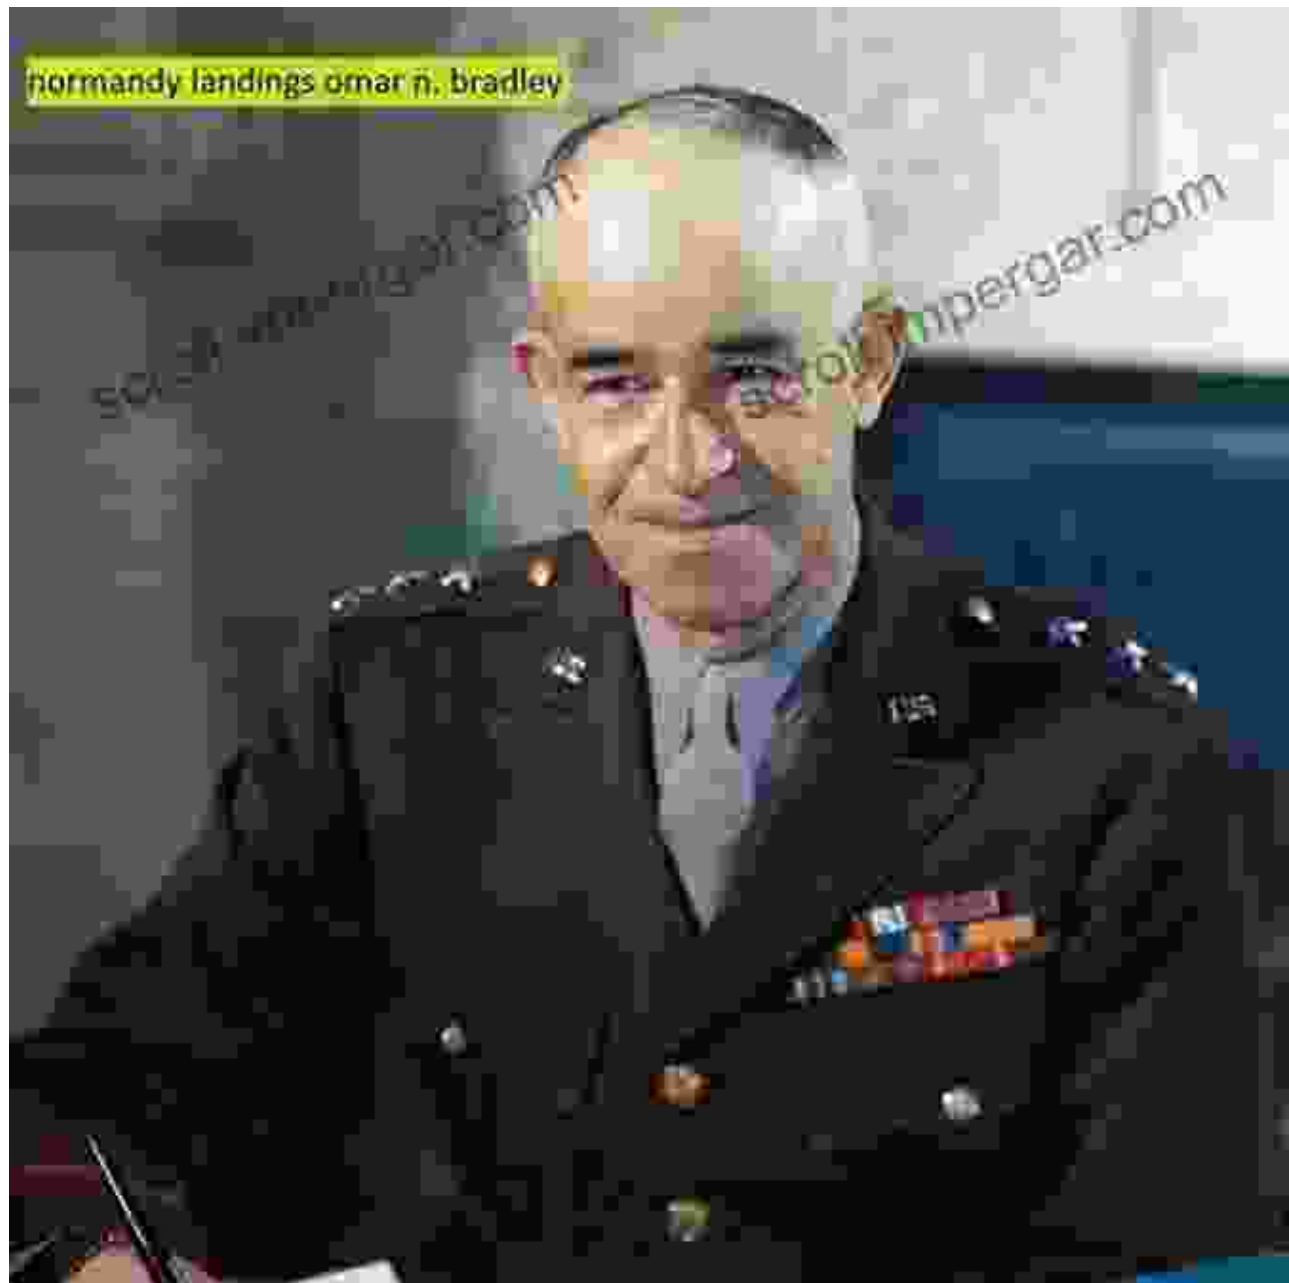

Omar Nelson Bradley was born in Clark, Missouri, in 1893. He grew up in a farming family and attended the United States Military Academy at West Point, graduating in 1915.

Military Career

Bradley served with distinction in World War I, participating in the Meuse-Argonne Offensive and earning the Silver Star.

During World War II, Bradley rose rapidly through the ranks, becoming commander of the 1st Army in 1943. He led the army in the invasion of Normandy and the subsequent liberation of France.

In 1944, Bradley became commander of the 12th Army Group, which consisted of the 1st, 3rd, 9th, and 15th armies. He led the group in the Battle of the Bulge and the final advance into Germany.

After World War II, Bradley served as Chief of Staff of the Army from 1948 to 1953. He was the first general to hold this position since George Washington.

During the Korean War, Bradley was appointed Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He served in this role from 1953 to 1957.

Leadership and Legacy

Omar Bradley was known as a skilled tactician and a compassionate leader who cared deeply for his troops.

His legacy as a general is marked by his success in leading large armies to victory in some of the most challenging battles of World War II and the Korean War.
